THE HON STEVEN MARSHALL MP

Premier of South Australia

The 37th Adelaide Festival will be a place of pilgrimage for lovers of art and culture from around the country. Enjoy 17 days and nights of incredible art as the Festival animates this beautiful city of ours.

Our cultural precincts are transformed as we showcase the very best work from across the country and from our own local communities, as well as centrepiece international productions in opera, dance and music.

Whatever you are doing in March, make sure you take the opportunity to soak up some of this remarkable Festival; see a show, head to the legendary Adelaide Writers' Week in the Pioneer Women's Memorial Garden or take in the free opening night extravaganza starring our very own Gravity & Other Myths.

I congratulate our Festival Directors Neil Armfield and Rachel Healy on once again creating a magnificent program - we are truly spoilt for choice.

JUDY POTTER

Chair, Adelaide Festival

We are delighted to bring you Neil Armfield and Rachel Healy's 2022 Adelaide Festival.

This time last year, I don't think any of us expected the impact of the pandemic to linger well into 2021, but there is a light at the end of the tunnel (apart from vaccinations!) and that is March 2022 when the Adelaide Festival takes centre stage in our Festival city.

In 2022, Rimsky-Korsakov's The Golden Cockerel continues our important collaboration with Festival d'Aix-en-Provence. There is also the world premiere of Watershed: The Death of Dr Duncan, a new South Australian work co-commissioned with Feast Festival and State Opera South Australia.

We sincerely thank the South Australian Government, the City of Adelaide, our corporate partners, Foundation Adelaide Festival and our philanthropic supporters. Without this continued and combined support, an international multi-arts festival of this scale would not be possible.

I'd also like to acknowledge and thank the Adelaide Festival and Foundation Adelaide Festival Boards along with the entire Festival team for their commitment to present a Festival which provides performance opportunities for so many artists and brings joy to a broad and diverse audience.

See you at the Festival.

"We were together. I forget the rest."
Walt Whitman

We are writing this in September 2021, half way through the second year of the pandemic. We know that as you read it, probably sometime between November and March 2022, September will feel prehistoric. Such is the pace of change as we progress from fear to hope for a better future in which we can return to live performance with joy and anticipation, rather than pessimism and anxiety.

We have come back from Europe full of optimism having witnessed audiences return with gusto to theatres, fully masked, double vaxed and filling every seat, but we're all too aware that this sunny ideal has as its dark twin inevitable illness, anxiety and super-human demands on health workers. In the face of all this, our commitment to deliver a festival that energises, comforts and reasserts the necessity of human creative imagination remains.

With so many millions across the globe still fighting this illness, so many women caged with monstrous partners, so many young people facing despair and loneliness, we've seen ill-directed explosions of rage. Let the 2022 Adelaide Festival unleash those feelings with a positive defiance: a feisty festival that won't lie down and shrink; that gathers a community of artists from across Australia and across the globe, a festival that begins with a phalanx of young bodies colliding and hurling each other through space, and ends with the breath of a hundred humans pleading for the pain in our souls to fly away.

Experience the release of primal dance, of exhilarating performance, of how the spark of collegiate music making can jump centuries. It's all there again for the taking: a celebration of body and soul and how great it is to keep them together.

Gravity & Other Myths

World Premiere / Australian Exclusive

2022's opening night spectacular confirms what we've known all along: that the mighty and venerable Adelaide Festival is the Edinburgh International Festival's slightly younger and less chilly southern sister. Our favourite homegrown "contemporary circus powerhouse", Gravity & Other Myths (GOM), whose sphere of fans has snowballed throughout the UK, stars in an opening co-production, which will also ring in the 75th Anniversary Edinburgh International Festival in August.

Those of you who saw The Pulse in 2021 will know what to expect when the full 30 strong troupe team up with a mass choir. Now add ancient Celtic rhythms to the equation. And fireworks. And amplification. And giant projection scrimms and a colossal ascending triangular lighting rig. We don't have a castle, but GOM's inspirational towers and turrets of bodies are equally breathtaking.

This will be a fun, beautifully produced, free event for families and friends to marvel at. A heart-in-mouth display of skill and co-ordination. But it will be more than that. From their humble DIY origins, every show mounted by this company is founded by a deep unspoken principle: to show what humans can do when they trust each other, support each other and urge each other to go further. Whether here on the grass, or 16,000 kilometres away on the cobblestones, we need to be reminded of those simple things.

Join this awesome community of performers in a celebration like no other.

Great Southern Land 2022

Featuring WILLIAM BARTON

2022 marks 40 years since the inaugural release of ICEHOUSE's legendary anthem Great Southern Land, written by frontman Iva Davies in homage to Australia and its landscape while homesick on the band's first overseas tour.

ICEHOUSE has performed the song on stages all over the world since then - for many, Great Southern Land is ICEHOUSE - but then in concert, memories are reawakened by songs like Hey Little Girl, No Promises, My Obsession, Crazy, Electric Blue, We Can Get Together and Man of Colours. Whether you are a long-term fan of their music or are encountering them for the first time, you'll be struck by the beauty of their melodies and progressions. The band is every bit as iconic as Great Southern Land and as open to contemporary transformation.

This Adelaide Festival opening weekend concert, performed under the stars at Adelaide Oval's Village Green as part of their 40th anniversary national tour, includes a guest appearance of Iva Davies' friend and yidaki (didgeridoo) master William Barton.

ICEHOUSE will be supported by Groote Eylandt's AIR award-winning and ARIA-nominated blues and roots artist, Emily Wurramara.

Presented in association with Live Nation.

The Golden Cockerel

By Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov
 Conducted by Arvo Volmer
 Directed by Barrie Kosky

Image: Jean Luis Fernandez

Australian Premiere / Australian Exclusive

Barrie Kosky is our most celebrated international opera director. After witnessing his two dazzling Adelaide Festival operatic centrepieces in recent years, Saul in 2017 and The Magic Flute in 2019, audiences have hoped for a trifecta. Adored for the startling vision he brings to familiar classics, in 2022 he's back with a work never before seen in Australia.

Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov is Russia's answer to Wagner and The Golden Cockerel, the summation of his craft, was conceived over the terrifying din of the 1905 revolution. Half surreal fairy tale, half political satire, it fell foul of Tsarist censors and poor Nikolai died with the voluptuous score of his imagination unheard. Premiering in 1909, it has become a key work of European operatic repertoire.

If you're transported by Scheherazade, or Flight of the Bumble Bee, you'll fall in love with this richly melodic, kaleidoscopic work, tailor-made for Kosky's inimitable aesthetic. In its impossibly demanding roles for bass, lyric coloratura soprano and stratospheric tenor you will hear three operatic Olympians who defined them: British-Ukrainian Pavlo Hunka, and Russian stars Venera Gimadieva and Andrei Popov. Their voices will spine-chillingly soar over the magnificent Adelaide Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Arvo Volmer.

Grab this exclusive opportunity, and be among the first to experience Kosky's extraordinary dreamscape of a production. You'll never forget it.

The name Pina Bausch galvanises Adelaide Festival audiences. Her equally influential near contemporary, Germaine Acogny, dubbed 'the mother of contemporary African dance', is less well known in Australia. Having met several times, the two women never directly worked together before Bausch's untimely death in 2009, but they are connected through one of the most seminal ballet scores of all time: Stravinsky's Rite of Spring.

Bausch's visceral 1975 version, widely regarded as the finest ever staged, had a lasting impact on Acogny: for her, steeped as she was in traditional Yoruba ritual, it exposed African foundations in the music's notional ancient Slavic rhythms. Now Salomon Bausch, as part of his mission to transmit his mother's greatest works to new generations of dancers, has initiated an extraordinary posthumous collaboration: a new staging of Pina's Rite with dancers based in African countries.

38 superb dancers, selected in an unprecedented audition process, from 14 nations across the continent, rehearsed for months at Acogny's École des Sables in Senegal, with every gesture from the original production recreated through the dance practice of its distinctive African performers.

Its remarkable companion piece, a tender antidote to the Rite's violence, is a new work created and danced by Acogny herself with none other than Malou Airaud, a founding member and icon of Bausch's company. common ground[s] sees these two septuagenarians expressing in movement their lives as grandmothers, mothers, daughters and matriarchs of the dance world.

This program, a tribute both to the enduring genius of Pina Bausch and to its expanding horizons, is simply unmissable.

"You run with your heart and forget all you have learnt before... It has to be real. If you are not exhausted at the end, you haven't danced it properly."

The Picture of Dorian Gray

By Oscar Wilde
 Sydney Theatre Company
 Adapted and directed by Kip Williams

The opulent and groundbreaking productions of director Kip Williams have been front and centre at the Helpmann Awards for several years, and Eryn Jean Norvill has been hailed as one of the best and most talked about actors of her generation.

For the first time on an Adelaide stage, you can savour the work of both at their virtuosic best in this remarkable stage adaptation of Oscar Wilde's classic, which had Sydney critics scrambling for superlatives and audiences leaping from their seats.

This re-imagining of The Picture of Dorian Gray is a lush period drama in knowing conversation with the here and now. Williams' audacious use of live and pre-recorded video allows Norvill to play all 26 characters simultaneously: it's theatrically alive and loaded with zeitgeist resonance. Wilde's study of the corrupting effects of obsessive self-regard and the relationship between worth and appearance leaps across the century to speak straight to us today. Williams and Norvill's long-standing collaborative relationship, amplified by some of our finest designers and technicians, finds perfect expression in this brilliantly inventive show that will simply take your breath away. An Australian landmark, not to be missed.

First a proactive foundation, then an orchestra, and now a movement, Chineke!, whose name translates as spirit of creation, has captivated the popular imagination, as evidenced by the wild response to every one of their four visits to the BBC Proms in recent years.

Chi-chi Nwanoku OBE, one of the UK's finest exponents of the double bass, played in the cream of London's chamber and period instrument orchestras for over 30 years. Of Nigerian-Irish heritage, her witnessing, in 2014, the revelation of the Kinshasa orchestra from the Congo playing to a typical traditional classical music audience triggered the birth of this unique platform for majority Black and ethnically diverse classical musicians.

A Chineke! concert guarantees three things: excellence, unadulterated joy and the discovery of great new (or neglected old) music. These two outstanding concerts feature the principal wind, horn and string players from the orchestra in every imaginable permutation, with Nonets and Quintets by Schubert (yes, The Trout), Rheinberger, Martinů and Prokofiev, alongside beautiful mini-orchestral pieces by the great British composer Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, and African-Americans William Grant Still and Valerie Coleman. And two new Australian commissions, one from William Barton and one from Deborah Cheetham, will also have their premieres.

Nwanoku, like her instrument, anchors this remarkable group of musicians with a simple but burning purpose: "If even one child feels that their colour is getting in the way of their musical ambitions, then I hope to inspire them... and show them that music, of whatever kind, is for all people." In witnessing Chineke!, in Australia for the first time, you are witnessing history.

Skywhales: Every heart sings

Patricia Piccinini

Skywhale first appeared in the skies above Canberra in 2013, widening the eyes of the population, leaving many speechless and certain city-folk more forthcoming about public art and public money than at any time since the National Gallery acquired Blue poles. After brief migrations to Tasmania, Japan and Ireland, Patricia Piccinini's monumental Skywhale has a new companion, Skywhalepapa.

Skywhalepapa stands some ten stories high and carries under his nurturing fins the brood of calves that his partner's magnificent digs had caused us to wonder about. As Piccinini says, what started as a character has "become a relationship and a narrative". This lofty pod, with their exemplary share-parenting credentials, will never crash and burn, and they make those Supercouples so beloved by gossip magazines, look miniscule.

Come with the kids to crane your necks and marvel at them and stay for Patricia Piccinini's visit to the Writers' Week Kid's Tent with her new children's book Every Heart Sings. You can also pick up a knitting pattern to make your own, listen to their new theme song (Jess Green's "We are the Skywhales") or think about fashioning your own version of the Three Mills Bakery speciality croissant in their honour. Art events don't come much bigger than this. They're tethered here for a limited time so don't miss them up close.

As his body hit the water, few heard the impact, but the ripple effect of the murderous act defied natural law and swelled to seismic scale.

It's 50 years since the infamous drowning of Dr George Ian Ogilvie Duncan; a moment in time that triggered an alleged police cover-up, a city-wide scandal, national outrage, a Scotland Yard investigation, pioneering gay law reform... and a glaring absence of convictions.

Watershed, a new oratorio commemorating this moment, is the product of some of Australia's most acclaimed creative talents. A searing, no-punches-pulled libretto by Alana Valentine and Christos Tsiolkas has been set by Brisbane composer Joe Twist, winner of the Chanticleer Prize for international choral composition. His affecting score is given theatrical life by director Neil Armfield and choreographer Lewis Major, bringing together solo voices, a dancer, the Adelaide Chamber Singers and an elite chamber orchestra under the baton of Christie Anderson.

Memorials to the unassuming academic have accumulated in the Torrens precinct of The University of Adelaide - sadness and anger at undelivered justice have gathered across the years - but a nuanced, probing, artistic response on this scale has never been attempted.

Fusing inquest transcripts, press clippings, private correspondence, real and imagined monologues spanning five decades of anti-gay violence, and 30 years of research by local historian Tim Reeves, this joint commission between Adelaide Festival, Feast Festival and State Opera South Australia demands the embrace of all thinking audiences, but is of special importance to this city.

Bangarra Dance Theatre

Written by Stephen Page
and Alana Valentine

World Premiere Season

As he approaches Elder status, Stephen Page continues to expand Bangarra's horizons and push into ever richer and more complex territory.

Even more ambitious than his recent Bennelong, this epic, contemporary corroboree for 17 dancers, five actors and four onstage musicians is deeply rooted in his own Yugambeh country, with its branches spreading widely across our continent's past and troubled present.

Wudjang is an ancestor whose bones are unearthed during construction for a new dam. She longs to be reburied in the proper way, but needs to lead a Yugambeh workman and his young niece on a spiritual quest to a place of hidden significance and power: to teach a new generation how to listen, learn and carry their ancestral energy into the future.

With deep emotion as well as humour, Stephen and his ensemble create a work of grace, healing and authentic power. Told in Mibinyah poetry and song, English text (in collaboration with award-winning playwright Alana Valentine) and Page's inimitable fusion of contemporary and traditional choreography, this reunion of a team of Bangarra stalwarts (composer Steve Francis, set by Jacob Nash, costumes by Jennifer Irwin and lighting by Nick Schlieper) with an extraordinary clan of dancers promises to be a benchmark Australian production.

You are ushered into an intimate but unassuming space and shown to a dimly lit table for one. In place of a dinner setting is an old 70's rotary-dial telephone and a simple switchboard. Gingerly, you lift the receiver and are directly connected to an exclusive club of... the sleepless.

The Nightline is a collection of real-life stories, rants, confessions, inanities, pranks and private thoughts compiled from over 600 anonymous callers left between the hours of midnight and 6am.

Guiltlessly eavesdrop on the voices of lone truckies, bored shift-workers, new parents, security workers, troubled or restless souls, all intertwined with an evocative, enveloping sound score. It's an unsettling but strangely beautiful experience, unique for the ear of each guest. There are moments when you laugh out loud, others when you're moved to tears.

Theatre-maker Roslyn Oades is well known for her non-fiction collage and verbatim-based work. For this, her fifth collaboration with sound artist Bob Scott, she put out the call to night owls via late-night radio and mysterious posters plastered on city walls. From the candid responses, they composed a suite of lonely nocturnes as varied and subtle as Chopin's.

Hop on the party line and become a very good listener for 40 unforgettable minutes.

"Oades' superb command of dramatic structure, aided immeasurably by Bob Scott's brilliant sound design... was an utterly unique intersection of the private and the shared, a call to the city to persevere, to check in on one another, to connect. I remember thinking: I must come again." ArtsHub

Juliet & Romeo

Lost Dog

Australian Premiere

When Shakespeare told Romeo and Juliet that he wanted to immortalise their story, the couple were delighted. Unfortunately, he changed some of the details: they didn't die in a tragic misunderstanding, they grew up and lived happily ever after.

Well, they grew up and lived, at least.

Now they're 40ish, at least one of them is in the grips of a mid-life crisis, they feel constantly mocked by their teenage selves and haunted by the pressures of being the poster couple for romantic love. They have decided to confront their current struggles by putting on a performance - about themselves. Their therapist told them it was a terrible idea.

Lost Dog is a dance/theatre/comedy/circus company whose artistic director, Ben Duke, is one of Britain's finest theatre-makers. A perfect balance between choreography and text, Juliet & Romeo is a funny and achingly sad duet that he devised with performer Solène Weinachter (partnered here with Kip Johnson). Beyond a clever conceit, it's a finely observed portrait of any marriage, where familiarity has replaced the first hormonal rush of desire. Even though it constantly undercuts its soundtrack of soaring love songs (by Sinatra, Simon and Garfunkel, Marvin Gaye and Prokofiev), this fantastic exercise in myth-busting also indulges our soft spot for the myth.

"It's not often you're doubled over with laughter and wiping away tears of sadness during the same show." The Scotsman

"A beautiful and utterly involving show: insightful, funny and rich." Time Out

The top minds of Europe were abuzz in 1761. Venus was transiting the sun for the first time since science had twigged that it could pinpoint our place in the solar system. Meanwhile, the most enlightened of Austria's ruling families needed a composer to provide what we'd call content for their pre-eminent orchestra. It was a dream gig in some respects: yes, you had to wear servants' livery but you got to live in a palace. Your bosses were no fools though - they could spot hackery a mile off - and even scarier were the musos' demands.

The 29-year-old Joseph Haydn was not only up for it, he kept the job for over 30 years, producing music of astonishing quality and quantity. The so-called Morning, Noon and Night symphonies were the first of some 80 that were written for the Esterházy band. They are utterly delightful and quirky (flattering even the double bass player with solo passages), and contain cryptic allusions to the astronomical excitement of the time. Our world-renowned Australian Haydn Ensemble, directed from the keyboard by Erin Helyard, will present them in three concerts, appropriately spread across a single day.

They'll also offer a glimpse of what else was going on in that eventful year: Bach's eldest son C.P.E. was writing jaw-droppingly audacious symphonies, while in Salzburg a five-year-old wunderkind was jotting down his first piano pieces. You will be struck by the fascinating lineage between three generations of musical genius.

All too rarely heard Haydn keyboard concertos and works by the teenaged Mozart make these programs a delicious brunch, lunch and dinner degustation. No reheated stodge here. Served with verve, fresh from the minds of the masters.

PROGRAM 1 – Morning, 10am

C.P.E. Bach: Sinfonia in e minor Wq.177

Manifesto

Stephanie Lake Company

World Premiere

The symbiosis between dancing and drumming is so elemental to human ritual and art that it's impossible to know which evolved first. Stephanie Lake, perhaps the most exciting choreographic talent to emerge in Australian dance in the last decade, likes to think big: her Colossus at the 2019 Melbourne Festival was a sustained hour of intricate contrapuntal movement by no less than 50 dancers. Her latest work, Manifesto, has a pitch as irresistible as it is ambitious: nine dancers, nine drum kits.

Each drummer/dancer work as a single unit, starting small but accumulating intensity, and as the rhythms become more complex, so do the movements; blurs of frenzy alternate with thrilling unisons as the raw, unamplified sound wraps around you with overwhelming power.

Composed by sought-after iconoclast Robin Fox (of 2020's Single Origin fame) for top local and interstate percussionists (including Nat Grant, Robbie Avenaim, Alex Roper and celebrated doom metal exponent Rama Parwata) Lake's amazing company are joined by a superb team of designers for this decidedly unmilitary tattoo.

Plunge into an exhilarating vortex of pure human energy.

"A monumental talent...Lake's work harnesses the kinetic energy of her extraordinary dancers to enduring effect."

ENESS

Image: ENESS

You're cruising past familiar hardware shops and fast-food outlets when suddenly, wha...? A gigantic cupid surrounded by 10 oversized goldfish in mock terrazzo ponds? Have the good burghers of Mount Barker District Council gone mad? Have they commissioned some folly to trump Taillem Bend's rhino or Kingston's cray?

No, they've partnered with the Adelaide Festival to delight you and your family. The world's first inflatable fountain is brought to you by ENESS, the creators of Airship Orchestra, a hit of Illuminate Adelaide. You might remember how nice it felt on a cold winter's night to be crooned to by lullingly benign aliens. Well, this five-metre high cherub may also boast cute LED eyes and an interactive soundtrack, but he's prone to squirting you with jets of water – and on a scorching summer afternoon that's nothing to whinge about.

ENESS could easily be a team of magical elves but are in fact an Australian collective who make truly wonderful things. Since 1997, this group of artists, musicians, software engineers, industrial designers and thinkers have entranced children and adults from museums of modern art to the streets of Mumbai.

They call themselves 'Happiness Architects' and their aim is to change public space by introducing unexpected artworks that forge deeper moments between friends, family and enable strangers to meet and find common ground. We think that's about the best mission statement ever.

The knavish lad is holding court for six fun-filled days only. Pack the kids in the car and zip up to Mount Barker. Make a day of it!

Resonance: Chamber Landscapes

Concert series curated by Erin Helyard

"The weekend at UKARIA in the Adelaide Festival is a unique jewel in the musical calendar of Australia."
Australian Stage

Image: Randy Larcombe

Australian Exclusive

Since we saw him rising from the pit playing a candle-lit chamber organ in Barrie Kosky's Saul (2017), Erin Helyard has been an Adelaide Festival denizen and we are thrilled to have him at the helm of 2022's Chamber Landscapes long weekend. As Artistic Director of Pinchgut Opera, Erin is probably the only musician in the country that commands deep respect as a scholar, conductor and curator while simultaneously being dubbed 'Australia's most engaging soloist', and he wears all his hats brilliantly in this eclectic treasury of concerts at UKARIA.

His chosen theme is Resonance. Of course it's the physical property by which instruments sound and listeners hear, but, individually and as a set, the concerts explore other senses of the word, including, as Erin puts it: "the delicate influences that echo between musicians, amongst cultures, and across generations."

A stellar, all-Australian crew will present exquisite and stimulating music from the sixteenth to the twenty-first centuries in a resonant and restorative blend of the known and the unknown.

Catch crack soloists from Sydney's groundbreaking Pinchgut Opera performing sacred music by Monteverdi and Handel's mini-opera Acis and Galatea; extraordinary young Adelaide cellist James Morley, unaccompanied; Hannah Lane, one of the world's finest baroque harpists; the ASQ with the much-loved Ravel and Debussy quartets; and the phenomenal Stephanie McCallum (who adds her two hands to Erin's at the rare and beautiful 1853 Érard piano, which he's bringing with him as oversized luggage from Sydney). There are fantastical, hilarious and deeply reflective works for wind quintet by Stravinsky, Ligeti and Elliott Gyger, and, for a unique and unmissable finale, a mind-expanding afternoon of Tibetan songs by world-renowned singer/composer Tenzin Choegyal and long-time Brisbane collaborators Camerata.

Nine brilliantly conceived programs to set the wild echoes flying around Womma Mu Kurta (Mount Barker Summit) and the corners of your mind.

World Premiere / Adelaide Exclusive

Emma Beech's art is both simple and hard to define. Labels like direct address performance, docu-drama, verbatim real-life portraiture, all seem to rob her storytelling of its straightforward warmth and worth.

Conversations with other people have always been central to her shows, but a few years back something happened that persuaded her to turn the lens on herself. Her mum and dad gave her a box of family snaps and, as she had a performance that night, she thought it might be fun to rummage through them for the first time in front of an audience of strangers.

Amongst all the embarrassing hilarity of hairdos and frocks was a shot of her mum, taken aged 40, holding her baby self, the little surprise born eight years after the last of her eight(!) brothers and sisters. Emma, at the time, was 40 herself and mother of 5-year-old triplets. Out of that instant electric connection between two very different women The Photo Box was born.

It's about a town in regional South Australia where everyone knows you, and a girl left to make her own mistakes and grow herself up. Family, choices, memory and myth-making, and how the baby of a big Catholic brood became devoted to the search for unsentimental truths. Borrowing from cinematic installation, The Photo Box is a funny and heartfelt new work from one of our most gifted performers.

Groundswell

Matthias Schack-Arnott

Image: Keith Tucker

A six-metre platform sits atop a sea of some 40,000 illuminated steel spheres. It's stunning to look at so you climb on to investigate and quickly discover that it's alive. As you walk, it tilts, causing rippling waves of subtly shifting or cascading ball bearings to summon a complex oceanic soundscape.

The sounds can be tranquil or visceral - it's all up to you. Oh, and to those (co-operative or vexatious) others who share the space.

As a percussionist and improviser, young Melbourne artist Matthias Schack-Arnott has collaborated with the top rank of contemporary composers (Steve Reich, Unsuk Chin, John Zorn and Liza Lim to name a few). But it's his beautifully sculptural performance works and sound installations that have brought him to recent prominence, working with leading designers such as Keith Tucker and Tilman Robinson.

Groundswell is the third of Adelaide Festival's interactive works of public art in Rundle Mall. Like Tatzu Nishi's A Doll's House and Robin Frohardt's The Plastic Bag Store, Groundswell can be happily enjoyed as straight-up, mind-boggling fun. But, by responding to every step you take, and making you mindful of your interactions with strangers, it's also a meditation on our precarious individual and collective relationship with the earth: our literal 'footprints' can trigger unforeseen events, like hurricanes from butterflies' wings.

It's free and fascinating for young and old. Galumph or tread lightly, each moment is guaranteed to be different from the last.

"Thoughts and prayers", "our hearts go out". Daily our representatives save us the trouble of expressing feeling for the victims of war, homelessness, oppression, domestic abuse or natural catastrophe. The numbing repetition evaporates meaning, leaving a gap easily filled by talk of "tough decisions" and "harsh realities". More than any medium, music can restore that meaning.

Singers and audiences alike were profoundly affected by the combination of community choir, fine orchestral playing and contemporary imagery in 2020's Mozart Requiem and 2021's A Child of Our Time. In 2022 the ASO, conducted by Benjamin Northey and 60 plus professional and amateur voices from across Adelaide, will perform some of the most inspiring - and rarely heard - choral music of the past century.

Latvian composer Pēteris Vasks writes deep, transcendent but humble music that is able to be grasped on one hearing. His Prayer for a Mother (1978) features luminous lines for soprano and ends with the spine tingling sound of scores of voices each quietly cooing to a newborn. Dona nobis pacem (1996) is a plea for peace that fashions a melody of childlike simplicity into an overwhelming cathedral of sound.

French prodigy Lili Boulanger was the first woman composer to win the prestigious Prix de Rome for composition, aged just 19, in 1913. During World War I, a few years before her life was tragically cut short at 24, she wrote four masterworks that are almost never performed, as they involve vast orchestral and choral forces. Three are Psalm settings addressing exile and oppression, but Old Buddhist Prayer extends its gently radiant heart to all living things.

Poulenc's uplifting Gloria of 1960 is devoid of posturing religiosity. Featuring some of the most sublime writing for soprano ever, it's a refreshingly human take on the Latin mass, mixing blazing optimism with playfulness and heartfelt supplication.

Join the ASO, Elder Conservatorium Chorale and Graduate Singers to share the end of the Festival with this spiritual tonic.

"Let everything that breathes, let all creatures everywhere, without enemies, without obstacles, overcoming their grief and attaining happiness, be able to move freely, each in the path destined for them." Old Buddhist Prayer

The country's longest running survey of contemporary Australian art, the Adelaide Biennial, returns. Entitled Free/State, a play on the optimism of SA's colonial origins, the 2022 edition is centred on artist provocateurs and outsiders to create a wild and vibrant exhibition for these most uncertain of times.

The Biennial showcases 25 artists from every state and territory across multiple generations with a focus on amplifying and celebrating individual artistic voices. Senior artists such as Tracey Moffatt, Julie Rrap and South Australians Angela and Hossein Valamanesh exhibit alongside cutting edge emerging artists Loren Kronemyer, Min Wong and JD Reforma. The Art Gallery of South Australia will be inhabited by immersive installations from artists Abdul-Rahman Abdullah, Stanislava Pinchuk and Darren Sylvester including interventions into non-traditional spaces within the gallery from Tom Polo, Kate Scardifield and Rhoda Tjitayi. Free/State embraces a diverse range of mediums from Sera Waters' intricate textiles, to Laith McGregor's epic large scale drawings and Shaun Gladwell's forays into frenetic video and extended reality works. Artists Reko Rennie, Dennis Golding and Mitch Cairns present deeply personal perspectives and examine notions of family, place and home.

Sebastian Goldspink, curator of the 2022 Adelaide Biennial, is a dynamic and fresh spokesperson for Australian art. Ten years ago he made a name for himself by commandeering empty car parks after dark in Sydney and transforming them into vibrant pop-up galleries for emerging artists. That driving commitment to ensuring diverse voices flourish shines through in this fantastic instalment of this significant exhibition.

Having an intimate one-on-one conversation with someone of your own generation is not uncommon. Such encounters become exponentially rarer as the age gap widens. At a time when ageing and isolation are becoming more acute than ever before, this gem of a piece puts you face to face, in a safe and private space with an older perfect stranger and invites you to freely converse.

You book individually, and walk alone through a portal, where you are met with a desk, a computer and a bespoke website that connects you to one of many remarkable, articulate seniors from around the country. Together you shuffle some virtual cards, click on one and ask the big questions that are revealed. Your companion does the same, and asks the big questions of you. And then you repeat the process. You can pass if you prefer, but most find this encounter to be like nothing else in their lives. Truth or Dare, You Can't Ask That, Catholic Confession; nothing comes close.

Yes, life's essential questions about sex and death are on the list, however the openness of the form allows for you and your senior interlocutor to take the exchange wherever you want; down memory lane, towards an urgent future or simply sharing a laugh with someone you don't know, across age and distance with such ease and delight.

Internationally acclaimed for her intergenerational participatory performances, Melbourne artist Samara Hersch, together with Bec Reid and Ponch Hawkes, has created a rare and unexpected encounter that will probe you to think differently about your own body and the body in front of you, which, like the game itself, are in a constant state of transformation. Step through the portal, and meet an elder who will welcome you to be as frank as you like. No one will be the wiser - except you.

Blindness

Australian Premiere / Australian Exclusive

As the lights change at a junction in a big city, a car remains motionless, its driver unable to go on. Suddenly, without warning or cause, he has lost his sight. It soon becomes clear that this is a blindness like no other, infecting all who come into proximity with it. Within days, it has spread throughout the city. The government tries to arrest the contagion by herding the newly blind into a disused asylum. But its attempts are futile. The city is in panic.

Based on Nobel Prize-winner José Saramago's dystopian novel Blindness, Juliet Stevenson's gripping narration unfolds around you through immersive binaural sound and lighting as the rise and, ultimately, profoundly hopeful end of an unimaginable global pandemic plays out.

Donmar Warehouse's acclaimed production, adapted by award-winning playwright Simon Stephens, directed by Walter Meierjohann with sound design by Ben and Max Ringham, is brought to Adelaide Festival by Arts Projects Australia after hugely successful seasons in New York, Hong Kong, Mexico City and London.

Karin Schaupp & Flinders Quartet

Musica Viva Australia

World Premiere Season

How many musicians have commissioned and performed pieces from pre-eminent composers and a famous playwright? Answer: one. So accomplished and charismatic is classical guitarist Karin Schaupp that she can tour one-woman shows by David Williamson (Lotte's Gift) one minute and wow concert crowds with guitar concerto premieres the next.

In this ravishing program, she reunites with Melbourne's wonderful Flinders Quartet (their 2011 collaboration album was ARIA-nominated) for the first performances of a new guitar quintet by Carl Vine, commissioned in memory of an audience member's daughter.

Schaupp will also perform solos, including the radiant Southern Cross Dreaming by British-Australian guitar hero Richard Charlton; the Flinders Quartet will play Imogen Holst's moving Phantasy Quartet; and the five will lead the charge home with selections from the most celebrated work for this ensemble, Boccherini's Fandango.

A delicious star-turn, ideal for curious first-timers and devoted aficionados alike.

After Kreutzer

Anna Goldsworthy and Andrew Haveron

Image: Andrew Beveridge

When Tolstoy said there was "something nasty in The Kreutzer Sonata" he was not referring to Beethoven's music but to his own deeply problematic novella of the same name. The giant of literature was slightly troubled about aligning himself with the tale's narrator: a uxoricidal psychopath, unhinged by sexual disgust and misogyny.

Sofiya Tolstaya was deeply disturbed by her husband's book, recognising both the dark self-portrait and the unjust travesty of herself that it contained. In recent years her own counter-novella, Who's Fault?, has come to light, and in this fascinating recitation/recital, a new version of the story from the perspective of the murdered woman is drawn from both texts.

As writer and presenter, few would be more apt than Anna Goldsworthy, whose elegantly styled fiction and non-fiction traverses both music and gender issues with equal clarity.

But, of course, the field narrows to one because Anna is also a nimble-fingered exponent of the one thing that appalled Tolstoy more than sex: music, "that most refined lust of the senses". At the piano she will be joined, in the incomparable sonata, by distinguished ex-Brodsky Quartet violinist, and BBC and Sydney Symphony Concert Master, Andrew Haveron.

Girls & Boys

By Dennis Kelly
State Theatre Company South Australia
Starring Justine Clarke

Australian Premiere / Australian Exclusive

She meets him in an airport queue and sparks fly. Their sizzling love affair cools to marriage, a mortgage, two kids - an ordinary but happy family life. Her natural working-class wit works to her advantage, and unexpectedly she starts rising above her allotted rung on the British social ladder. The power dynamic between them shifts - imperceptible cracks become yawning gulfs - but when the house they built falls, nothing prepares her for the devastation.

The innocent sounding Girls & Boys is a searing one-woman show by Dennis Kelly, the celebrated wordsmith of in-yer-face classics Osama the Hero and DNA, as well as the brilliant dialogue for Tim Minchin's Matilda. He's also a go-to writer for TV, and his brand of outrageous black humour went on to inspire Fleabag and Catastrophe (Sharon Horgan is a long-time collaborator).

State Theatre Company South Australia Artistic Director Mitchell Butel directs a high wire act, balancing comedy and drama, which has stunned audiences in London and New York. Its stellar solo role is brilliantly filled here by Justine Clarke, whose popular warm presence has made some forget the kind of dark steel that she can deliver (remember her roles in Love My Way and Tangle).

A teasing, edge-of-your-seat entertainment that turns to terror, this is a piece of theatre to gasp at, to relish and to ponder.

Artfully fusing jazz, hip hop, no wave and post-gospel soul, Genesis Owusu is an inventive and unique voice in the Australian music scene. Reference points jump wildly from The Clash to N.E.R.D., Prince to Solange Knowles, without feeling forced or incongruous. With a commanding live performance, for which Rolling Stone labelled him a "showman savant", the 23-year-old creates music that is ambitious, experimental and cerebral. Drawing on his experiences as a Ghanian-Australian, he speaks to the relationship between racism, mental health and identity with urgency and honesty. Genesis Owusu's genre-hopping sound is stylish and full of substance.

Babe Rainbow

With roots in Byron Bay, psych-rock band Babe Rainbow create an experience that harkens back to the optimism of 60's and 70's counterculture. Their critically acclaimed fourth album, Changing Colours, is a relaxed meditation that draws a line between California and Byron Bay; compressing time, like a needle skipping over the past half century of music. Babe Rainbow's organic musical style calls to mind the music of James Taylor or the Beach Boys after they ditched their surfboards, adding their own gently meditative take on neo-psych hip hop. The result feels like distilled sunshine.

A Better Picture

We feted 2021 as heralding a new dawn but it turned out COVID had a few more pivots and plunges in store for us. Although South Australia has been mercifully spared the worst of it, the pernicious Delta strain wreaked new havoc on our plans, arts community and health systems, and, as we raced to vaccinate, lights at tunnels' ends or on hills seemed dim (even as gas ones burned brightly).

Through the ennui, our authors and academics, poets and journalists dug deep and kept writing. They kept exploring, imagining, interrogating and inventing - engaging in the kind of expansive thinking that opens up possibilities and helps us see things anew. Our quest at the 2022 Adelaide Writers' Week is to join our writers to think not just of the bigger picture, but of a better picture. To dream of a way we can build a post-COVID world with greater equality, humanity and community.

Our 2022 Festival features some of Australia's most interesting and erudite minds - plus a few Zooming in from elsewhere. All come ready to contribute their most insightful and provocative ideas and I have no doubt that the combined creativity and imagination of our authors and audiences can bring a better picture into focus. I look forward to joining you in the Gardens in March for what will be my final Adelaide Writers' Week.

In the National Interest

Head to the Gardens every day at 12pm for Writers' Week's In the National Interest series. We are delighted to partner with Monash University Publishing on their series of the same name to present some of Australia's most incisive thinkers exploring the critical issues facing Australia today.

Writers' Week speakers include Kevin Rudd, Malcolm Turnbull, Rachel Doyle, Michael Bradley, Saxon Mullins, Martin Parkinson, Mark Willacy, Samantha Crompvoets and Fiona McLeod on topics ranging from Leadership, Courage, Accountability, Law Reform and Military Culture. Drawing on experiences from their working and personal lives, our contributors interrogate current realities and propose pathways to a better future.

Plane Tree Stage

The Plane Tree Stage comes alive all week with discussions both pertinent and profound. On Monday we examine The China Question, delving into the history and culture of our most enigmatic neighbour as experts ponder how we can best manage our vexed relationship with Beijing. On Tuesday we invite an array of wonderful writers to Tell Me Your Story, showcasing the illuminating memoir and autofiction published in the last 12 months.

Both days conclude with poetry readings and Twilight Talks - beautiful ways to end your days - before Sonya Feldhoff and ABC Adelaide take over on Wednesday and Thursday.

Kids' Day (ages 2-11)

Be part of a magical Saturday of stories, performance and hands-on fun as writers, performers and illustrators take over the Torrens Stage to enliven and excite our youngest readers. The Opening Weekend kicks off with a stellar lineup of Australia's biggest names in children's books including Remy Lai (Pawcasso), Andrew McDonald and Ben Wood (Real Pigeons series), Mem Fox (The Tiny Star, Possum Magic), Felice Arena (Specky Magee series, Fearless Frederic) and artist Patricia Piccinini (of Skywhale fame) among many other guests. It's a jam-packed program of free activities, so come join the fun with some terrific book-ish activities specially designed for the under 12 crowd.

Rounding out the Middle Grade & YA Day are performances from Australia's best Spoken Word poets on the Plane Tree Stage with the return of Hear Me Roar! Teens and tweens can relax and enjoy author conversations, panels and spoken word when the bright stars of contemporary literature light up the stage.

Youth & Education

The thrill of attending thought-provoking and inspiring performances and exhibitions has never been so important for our students given the uncertainty of current times. Global research into the impact on young people engaging with art and live performance clearly demonstrates the importance of the role of teachers in providing opportunities to introduce students to big ideas, crucial global themes and new perspectives on the world in which they live.

Thanks to the generous philanthropic support of the Lang Foundation, we can continue to offer special prices for schools.

$20 per student /$15 per student for Equity.

Student ticket price for The Golden Cockerel is $30.

Transaction fees apply.

A Festival for the Future

As an iconic event for our community, we want Adelaide Festival to be an exemplar of environmental responsibility and know that we can make a vital and significant contribution to a future that we want our children to inherit.

We are committed to reducing our impact on the environment and we are proud to become the first major multi-arts festival in Australia to be certified carbon neutral.

We will consistently measure and reduce our impacts on the environment, while offsetting the remaining carbon emissions involved in presenting our arts festival.

We are working with our staff, artists, suppliers, crew, volunteers, donors, sponsors and audience to ensure that sustainability is a key focus in everything we do.

Some of the things we are doing to minimise our carbon footprint:

- In 2021, all waste from outdoor sites was diverted from landfill
- Where possible we are reusing, repurposing or recycling most of the materials used to present our Festival
- We are minimising our use of plastic products
- We provide bike parking at our outdoor venues

This year, we are offsetting all of our carbon emissions, including all travel and accommodation associated with the Festival.

2022 Adelaide Festival
proudly supported by

THE UNIVERSITY
of ADELAIDE

We have thousands of stories to tell.

Through music, art and performance we create tomorrow's stories.

The University of Adelaide has a long story of proudly driving the arts sector not just in SA, but across Australia for over 135 years. But it's what our students will do next that excites us most today.

Our partnership with the Adelaide Festival celebrates the vital role art plays in communities and allows our students to be inspired to push boundaries and create their own story.
